

HEAVY DAMAGES AGAINST L. & N. ROAD

VERDICT FOR $10,000 IN ENGLISH SUIT—OTHER COURT NEWS.

The suit for $10,000 damages brought by the administrator of Miss Hattie K. Engleman was finished and resulted in a verdict against the Louisville & Nashville railroad for $10,000. In May 1906 Miss Engleman was instantly killed by an L. & N. passenger train at what is known as Woods' crossing on the Knob Lick pike, while en route from her home to town. Two years ago her administrator secured a judgment for $10,000 but the case was reversed by the court of appeals on the ground that it was not shown in trial of the case that the company's train had been in the habit of whistling at the crossings. At the second trial it was proven that such was the custom, but the day on which Miss Engleman lost her life it was shown that the train gave no warning of its approach. The defect in the first trial of the suit having been remedied, in the second, it is now quite certain that the judgment will stand in the higher court. The accident which cost Miss Engleman her life was one of the saddest that has ever occurred in this community. She was just 16 years of age and a bright, lovable young girl.

In the case against D. C. Stipple, against John Jones the jury could not agree and the case goes over until the June term. The suit was the result of a disagreement over a hay deal.

Young Jayhawker

OF KENTUCKY BLOOD MAKES A GOOD SPEECH.

The Augusta, Kansas Journal gives a speech made by Master Zach Taylor at an old settler's reunion on Washington's birthday. The young man is a son of Sam Taylor, one went from Casey county, to the Southwest state a number of years ago, and is widely known and related in Lincoln. One of the best things about him is that he is a constant reader of the I. J., as are so many of those who have left this part of Kentucky for homes in the west. The speech of the promising young orator was as follows:

"I'm not an old settler, but I'm a Jayhawker, all right—the only one in our family—and I'm glad to help you celebrate all I can. If I were just a little bigger I could make more noise about it."

"My mother and father, sister and brother are Corn-Crackers. I don't know much about that state except that they have lots of 'shoots and bops' and when the election is over it takes a long, long time to count the votes."

"My they do scrap back there. You never know when you've got a fellow licked for good. I'm not afraid to go there, but I would rather live out here in the big west and take my chances with the hot winds and Populists."

"I think it is just great to help celebrate Washington's birthday, for he was a fine man. He didn't happen to be born in Kansas, but he couldn't help that. I believe he would have come to Kansas if he'd had time and a railroad ticket. He could have tried his little hatchet on a whole hedge row out here and I bet his father wouldn't have said a word."

"If Mr. Washington could step off to Kansas today, and see her broad prairies, railroad systems, school system, auto system, and divorce system, wouldn't he snicker? And wouldn't he smile to see our women in hobble skirts, taking their husbands out to vote?"

"I knew he would like to attend an old settlers' reunion here. He would get right up and say: 'My dear people, I'm proud of you! You've squelched the Indian, grasshopper and chicken, and I verily believe you are going to win in your tussle with the tick-worm. Now, if you would have a pepper state, you must get rid of your cornflowers, old bache'os and big trials on the Frisco."

PREACHERSVILLE

Mr. Richard Williams has a hand full of old coins, Spanish Mexican and U. S. On a Spanish coin, about the size of our 25-cent piece bears the date 1781, being over 130 years old. We also saw a chair which was brought from Virginia on a pack horse by William Poe, who was a pioneer and Indian fighter, when there were no more than a half dozen settlements in Kentucky. He settled in Garrard county, about a mile and a half east of Lancaster, on the present pike to Buckeye. Mrs. John Williams, who was a Miss Romans of Garrard is a descendant of the brave old pioneer, and treasures this fine old heirloom very highly. It is solidly built of black walnut and good for another hundred years. To sit in this roomy old chair, close your eyes, it is not hard to imagine yourself back in the quality times when the tomahawk and the scalping knife gleamed amid the grand old forefathers, and frequently bathed themselves in the white man's blood!

An infant child of Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Brown is very ill.

After Rev. Johnson delivered his address on Sunday morning on the subject, "Booze and Boodle," the temperance committee submitted the following:

Whereas the licensed liquor traffic is a great evil and a constant menace to all our civil and religious institutions.

Be it resolved: That we favor the overthrow of this great iniquity. We also urge all friends of temperance, sobriety and good government to rally with their influence and votes, to hold the ground we have already gained. We believe it would be a disgrace and an everlasting shame for the good old county of Lincoln and go back to the wet columns.

Be it further resolved: That we earnestly request our present officials to strictly enforce the law on this question and we pledge them our support in this behalf. (Signed).

B. T. LUNSFORD, Chm'n.

E. B. THORNTON,

P. E. FARRISH,

F. L. THOMPSON.

After the above resolutions were read the congregation of near five hundred people rose to their feet, thereby unanimously ratifying the report. Taken all in all it was a stirring temperance meeting.

M. O. Kennedy will soon go to Bryansville to run a store in connection with his brother-in-law, Mr. E. B. Dickerson. M. O. is a live wire anywhere, he is and we believe the new firm will meet with success.

Mr. John Carpenter and son, Oliver, came from Florida Saturday to visit the families of S. D. Carpenter and W. H. Cummins. They will spend some time here before returning to their home at Red Rock, Okla.

Levi Sowder, bought a cow and calf of Dabney Davis for $31. Willson and Sowders bought some calves from John Davis at $15.

There is practically no effort in this section for another tobacco crop. Several who have had to almost give their crop away, and even lost heavily by so doing, assure us that they are done with tobacco for good. More corn, more wheat.

Mr. Tom Hopper has moved back to Lincoln county from Frankfort and has bought a farm of F. M. Deacon on Crag Orchard pike.

Broughtontown is building up it has a broom factory in operation and is making good brooms.

Asker Hartell is doing a good business in the mercantile line. He is a nice man and will treat you right when you are in his store.

Robert Turner has sold his farm to Charles Plummer and Robert Turner has purchased another from Frank Deaney.

Richmond Dry

ANTI-SALOONISTS WIN BIG VICTORY IN WOOD'S TOWN.

Richmond went "dry" Friday by 123 majority after one of the biggest campaigns and elections ever held in that city between saloon and anti-saloon advocates. Three out of four precincts in the city were carried by the dry element. Saloons were voted out four years ago by 150 majority. Immediately following the announcement of victory, all church and school bells began to chime, while the court house square was filled with people shouting and singing songs. The celebration was conducted by a big jubilation at the court house that night, when a vote of thanks was extended to former Mayor C. E. Woods and others for their work in the election. The day began with the prayers held at all churches. The election was the quietest, most peaceful and hardest fought ever held there.

We believe the Courier-Journal is right in advocating a platform convention for the state democracy. However we'd hate to run for office on a platform of democracy if it was left to the C-J., to name the plank. We do not believe that it would be desirable to hold a platform convention until after the primary. A convention which is sovereign in the party might take it into its head to nominate the ticket for state offices while it was at it. The suggestion that the two state democratic committees and the successful candidates after the primary get together and draw up a platform isn't a bad one, when it is carefully considered.

HOW TO INCREASE POULTRY PROFITS

ABLY HANDLED BY RUSSELL BROWN AT RECENT FARMERS INSTITUTE.

At the recent Farmers' Institute held here, Russell Brown, of this city, read an able paper on "Poultry Profits and How to Increase Them." There is a great and growing interest in pure bred poultry all over the country and Mr. Brown's address was an especially timely one. It was as follows:

I will give a few of the profits. First is corn; it brought in $1.10, 100 bushels of the year 1909 and compare them with that of 1910. First is corn; it brought in $1.75, 100 bushels. Second is cotton, it brought in $20.00, 100 bales. Third is wheat, it brought in $2.25, 100 bushels. Next is the product of poultry which was $200, 100,000.

Now dear farmer are you getting your share of this money? I might add that here that poultry produced more than that during the year 1910. But does your poultry bring you any profit? Certainly it does. I see an old fellow sitting there now. He is laughing up his sleeve for he knows that the few chickens his wife has buys the food for the table and the clothes for the children. Then if poultry is a profit how can we increase this profit?

First to produce profit we must produce eggs. To produce eggs we must have a laying hen, a hen to lay requires certain advantages and certain attention. They must be summed up thus. She must be in perfect health and perfect comfort. These are obtained by the attention given her.

Last winter I spent two weeks in the country, five miles out from Lancaster on the Lancaster and Crab Orchard pike. It was the two weeks just before Christmas or the two weeks after, I don't quite remember which. One morning I was asked to feed the chickens and taking a gallon and a half bucket of corn I went to the henhouse. There was about ten inches of snow on the ground and I found the chickens all at the henhouse, about one hundred and fifty in all. Some were on the floor some on the roof, and I found three or four outside in a tree, where they had roosted that night. The henhouse was open had cracks in it, and I found lots of the fowls with combs half frosted. The roof was in the top of the building and running always. The droppings had accumulated on the floor in large quantities. I am sure the henhouse had not been cleaned out in two years. No nests to speak of and a bad looking bunch of fowls. I gathered the eggs that day myself and I got five, which I thought was a whole lot for the attention given them.

That night I asked, if I heard the work of any profit and was informed that they were of the greatest importance, as they supplied the table and family needs.

I then went over to see a man on the adjoining farm who had the spring before bought 16 fine Minorcas of a neighbor of mine, saying he was only going to raise thoroughbred fowls. On arriving I found the house wife at home and she was a very glad I had come as her chickens were all sick and she wanted to know what to do for them. On going out to look at them I found about fifty of the worst looking birds I ever saw. Their eyes and heads were swollen their nostrils running and they were no more than flesh and bone I told her I knew what was the matter and asked her to show me where they roosted. She took me to an old shed that had been a barn and was now left as worthless, doors and windows were open cracks in the walls and even planks off. I asked the lady if any of them were laying. I wanted to find out if she had any other chickens. She told me they were not. I told her to send to town for the best rooster she could find and to build those little warm boxes. I have not seen her since, but I know her profits depend on, whether she made a change or not.

Now farmers, your fowls may not be in as bad a state as this, but I know from looking all over the country that things can be greatly improved. If poultry is profitable, under such circumstances as I have mentioned, how will you manage under such conditions what would the result be if properly cared for? Why, poultry will produce more clear money for the time and amount invested than any other product of the farm.

Then why do we not get to work instead of letting it be a side-line that will run itself? Well what are we going to do to remedy these defects? First build better houses. Or take a day off from around some country man's store and fix the old lady's hen house up. During the summer when the birds are roosting in the trees is the best time. Give it a good cleaning put out a little lime and take a part in this great business. Strip the houses put in new window glass, when it has been broken out, for cold damp quarters are the main cause of roup and where that is profit can't be. Next is the feeding.

Do not feed all one kind of feed, but feed a variety, of course fowls on the farm forage and pick up the larger part of their living but not all. We all know what a healthy hen is a working hen and the laying hen is the working hen.

Now to keep them working build a small shed next to the hen house and fill this about ten inches deep with chaff. This chaff is easily secured, it can be either the refuse part of clover hay or straw. Feed all grain feeds in this and make them work for it. Corn and wheat are both splendid feeds to use in the chaff.

Next is the arrangement for having this food stored. This food passes to the craw and from there to the gizzard and here is where the process of grinding takes place. The fowl must have something sharp in the way of grit to grind this food, a good thing for this is ground oyster shell. It can be bought for 65 or 70 cents per hundred pounds and it fills a double purpose, besides furnishing grit it supplies lime. One pound of the shell contains enough lime to completely coat seven dozen eggs. Another very important element in egg production is plenty of fresh water, because the yolk of the egg is composed of 50 per cent water and of the white 85.47 per cent is water. If you haven't a branch or pool of clean water near, it should be supplied every day, clean out the hen house at least once in two weeks in the spring and don't let lice crawl on your fowls for a lousy hen cannot be in perfect health and only the hen in perfect health will produce eggs, and eggs are the profits.
